President's Message

The helm has been passed and our GLAAC ship has left the harbor. Founding President, Lynda Polk, turned over the gavel at our December installation ceremony after leading the establishment of our club and bringing it to maturity. As incoming President I will be forever grateful to Lynda for her strong leadership in building the infrastructure of our club. She led the development of our updated constitution and bylaws, strong financial structure, and ambitious rally schedule.

I take the helm with confidence that we will continue the course already set. However, our future depends completely on our members' continued willingness to step up and assume leadership and support roles. We are fortunate to have Tim Murphy as 1st Vice-President and Pam Pall assuming the officer of 2nd Vice-President. I could not have better backup. Equally essential to the club is treasurer, Dennis Pall, who has dedicated hours to keeping our finances in control. We all owe him a big "high-five." Marion Kuhns graciously stepped forward to serve as Secretary. Pam Pall will continue as our Events Chair. Pam, you are our most valuable player. Plans are in the works for a committee to fulfill the Events position. More on that later. Nancy Murphy continues as Membership Chair. She sends greetings to our new members and maintains our always changing roster. Jean Amundsen will continue as Urban Update newsletter editor. Her primary challenge will be to motivate our President to write this front-page article. Jim Cahill keeps our web page up to date and Lynda Polk will continue her involvement as our Social Media Chair. With a team like this, we can't miss.

Pam Pall has arranged a wide array of rally sites for the year. From February 21-25 we'll congregate at East Shore RV Park in San Dimas--a true urban camping experience. I hope you can join us. March 13-18 is our much anticipated gathering at Refugio State Beach. Only through the Pall's persistence with State Parks personnel were we finally able to book the group site.

In future editions of the Urban Update we will alert you to upcoming events. Members will be notified by email of sign-up times and deadlines for those events. Special request: If you change email accounts, phone numbers or other vital information please let Membership Chair, Nancy Murphy, know so she can update our club roster.

I'd like to welcome new members Scott & Diana, Zaynea & Rizwan, Ludger & Margaret, Ajit, Phillip & Janice, Roger, Tom & Holly, and Andromeda & Glenn. We look forward to you joining us at these rallies. It has become a tradition that the first night of a Rally is "ABC." At a designated campsite, bring an Appetizer, a Beverage of your choice, and Chair. We sit around a propane fire exchanging stories of recent Airstream campouts, good places to camp, maintenance and repair of our rigs, and general good conversation. We make a special effort to introduce new members to the group. Y'all come.

Alan

December Business Meeting and Holiday Party December 6-9, 2018

Twenty GLAAC rigs rolled into Flying Flags RV Resort in Buellton for a long weekend of Club business and fun times. Our hosts, Michael & Nancy Jackson and John & Susan Barrett, worked tirelessly to make this yet another weekend of GLAAC fun and friendship.

It had been raining early in the week, but after a slightly soggy Thursday evening appetizers party and a few overnight showers the clouds parted and the remainder of the weekend was perfect for relaxation, discovering local eateries and wineries, strolling and shopping in Solvang, and doing a little antiquing in Los Alamos.

On Saturday morning we conducted our annual business meeting and made plans for the upcoming year. Further exploration of nearby sights was our agenda for the rest of the afternoon.

We gathered in the clubhouse on Saturday evening for our annual holiday dinner and fun fest. The home-cooked meal was delicious, the conversation and camaraderie stimulating. The Ugly Sweater contest and Steal-a-Gift were enjoyed by all.

The highlight of Saturday evening was honoring our founding President, Lynda Polk, and passing the gavel to incoming President, Alan Amundsen. Surely Lynda must have felt like a proud but wistful mom as she watched her precious child head out into the world. Not to worry, however; Lynda will continue serving the Club as Social Media Chair.

What a wonderful way to end another enjoyable year of Fun, Friendship, and Adventure! Everyone departed with high hopes for a 2019 of continuing great times.

Borrego Springs RV Resort January 10-14, 2019

The desert called and a small group of GLAAC members gathered at the Borrego Springs RV Resort for a weekend of dry camping and exploring, discovering the wonders of this desert area in the very southern part of our great state.

The weather was cold but beautiful at our dry camping site overlooking the golf course lake complete with ducks during the day and serenading coyotes at night. Those of us who brought our clubs were able to get in a few rounds on the beautifully-maintained course.

In addition to relaxing, hiking the many canyons, doing some off-road exploring, and visiting the small art museum, we all became enthralled by the 160 metal sculptures that dot the landscape around town. From a medieval dragon to prehistoric dinosaurs, to a padre and more, we were amazed by them all.

Of course we gathered around the campfire, and shared appetizers and pot-luck delicacies. Saturday evening was really cold, so we repaired to a local eatery, Carlee's, for a fun evening of good food and cheer. We welcomed new members, Marc & Wendy and new friends Nancy & Oscar- who brought their new-to-them 2003 slide-out Airstream all the way from Northern California just to hang out with us! We all look forward to a return visit to this beautiful area.

#60 at Lake Clark NP

Well we did it! Finally made it to all 60 National Parks. It's been decades in the doing, but we picked up speed when we bought our first Airstream in 2014. The Airstream gave focus to our wanderings as this was a new lifestyle for us. The first thing we did was research how many actual NP's there really are as the National Park Service now manages over 418 entities. Besides the National Parks, 88 are National Monuments, 19 are Preserves and 129 are National Historic Sites or Parks and so on. Our goal was just the National Parks. The Michael Joseph Oswald Guide to National Parks became our bible.

Our boat, Wandering Star, at anchor in Glacier Bay NP

We spent many years as sailors and were able to explore several parks by water. Most memorable were the three days inside Glacier Bay, where there is a nail-biting lottery for private boat admittance. We spent a week in Northeast Harbor in Acadia NP in Maine, where we were weathered in for a few days due to Hurricane Dan back in 2009. We never imagined we'd have hurricane trouble in Maine. St. John, Virgin Islands, or maybe Biscayne Bay or Key West's Dry Tortugas, but not Maine. And for years our own Channel Islands National Park was our boating playground. With those accomplished along with a trip to American Samoa's Pago Pago, a newly established National Park in the late 80's (it wasn't officially recognized by Samoa until 1993 when the NPS was able to lease the land for 50 years) we thought we had the hard parts done. However, there were still almost 30 parks we'd not visited and at least a dozen more that warranted a closer, second look.

Me at Acadia NP

Isle Royale Harbor

Our summers, of late, have been spent crisscrossing the country, tying together visiting family and friends with visits to National Parks. Some were right along the way, but others took us off the beaten path, and some are not even accessible by road. Voyageurs in Northern Michigan and Isle Royale in Northern Minnesota are best explored by boat or kayaks. In both cases, we camped as close as possible and went to visit by boat.

Ade at Voyageurs NP

We never try to camp IN the park's boundaries except during off season. We are not skilled at securing coveted reserved sites 6-months in advance, nor carefree enough to try to grab a spot on the morning of our arrival. Our formula is to find camps adjacent to the parks where we can secure a reservation.

We're often asked which our favorite park is. Our answer is we like them all – well, except maybe Guadalupe Mountains. We have come to appreciate how each park was established and the exceptional people that were responsible for making it happen. The politicians only get involved long after the often-times heroic vision, passion, and endurance of one person or a small group of ordinary people decide that this place is special, they must protect it for the generations to come.

Alaska is extra special. We've done its eight parks in three visits. First on our boat. Next, we rented a Class C and explored Denali and a bit of Wrangell-St. Elias and Kenai Fjords. And finally, this summer we flew bush planes to visit the Final Four – those you can't reach by road or boat.

Our first stop took us north to tiny Beetles, Alaska, 35-miles above the Arctic Circle. From here we fly into both Kobuk Valley NP and Gates of the Arctic NP. We stayed at the Beetles Lodge, the only accommodations, bar and restaurant in this region with a tiny air strip and just steps from the National Park visitors center.

It was here that we first encountered "Park Collectors," individual travelers who are also on a quest to 'Collect' all the parks. We proudly stated that we were here to get #56 to #59. Then someone said, "but there are 60 now." What? Noooo! It was then we learned that the St Louis Arch area had been re-designated a National Park in July, just days before this trip. Ah, but then we were assured that since we'd visited the Arch and Memorial a few times, we could still count it as done. Phew. So, we added Gateway Arch National Park to our done list, and we were still counting down the Final Four.

Gates of the Arctic NP

No roads enter Gates of the Arctic NP. Most visitors need to take a bush plane to visit the park. Some get dropped off and then backpack and paddle out miles of this pristine wilderness. We took the 4-seat bush plane option into the park's Brooks Range. It was magnificent flying over the endless oxbow rivers and through the towering, snowcapped craggy mountains. There are no landing strips allowed in the park, so our mid-summer visit made it difficult for our pilot to find a place to land. Continuous snow melt changes the water levels of the rivers hourly making a dry landing difficult. After some searching, we were able to put down on a newly exposed rocky beach so we could explore some of the area on foot. It is the quiet that is most remarkable. All we could discern was the movement of the water and the slight rustle of the leaves. We saw no one.

Kobuk Dunes lunch

Kobuk Valley NP is not far from Gates of the Arctic, but the topography is vastly different. This arctic wilderness is flat and barren. The tundra is soggy as the permafrost prevents drainage. It is also home to the Great Kobuk Sand Dune. There are no roads, trails or facilities in the park and again the best way to see it is by bush plane. Experienced backpackers and paddlers can work with an outfitter if they want to create a multi-day exploration. We flew in and landed on a pristine Sand Dune and set up a picnic lunch under the wings. Again, total silence. No footprints, not a soul around. We were too early in the year to be able to catch a glimpse of migrating caribou.

Kennecott Mill in Wrangell-St. Elias NP

We revisited Wrangell-St. Elias, this time taking the teeth-rattling McCarthy Road into Kennecott Mill and Inn. The Root Glacier is easily explored from the historic Inn. We also returned to Kenai Fjords just to hang out in a tiny cabin on the shores of Resurrection Bay. We'd arranged a private boat to take us out to the little coves and bays, however the weather did not cooperate. Looks like we will have to go back again for a deeper explore. Not a bad thing.

Glacier view from McCarthy Road, Wrangell-St. Elias NP

Bear with its catch near Brooks Falls

Our 59th park was Katmai on the Alaskan Peninsula. We really wanted to get up close to the Grizzly Bears at Brooks Camp, which is also home to the NPS center, and so was our best option. Again, this park is only accessible by plane or boat. We took a seaplane in and were delighted to immediately see bears frolicking in nearby Naknek Lake. There are no fences, so the mandatory first stop for everyone is the National Park HQ where we underwent an hour-long training on how to handle the inevitable bear encounters. There are viewing platforms so you can observe, out of harms way, literally dozens of bears at a time in the lake or along the Brooks River as they are fishing for spawning salmon in the falls. The bears, usually two or three together would roam throughout our scattered sleeping cabins to eat the grass, scratch their backs on the trees and wrestle with each other. What a show!

Our most elusive and final National Park was beautiful Lake Clark on the Alaskan Peninsula where the Aleutian mountain Range meets up with the Alaskan Range. It is only accessible by air and there are many bad weather days when flights are grounded. The miserable weather cancelled our planned float plane excursion, but we didn't give up. We scrambled and were able to find a 6 passenger scheduled all weather flight through the mountain passes and into Port Alsworth, site of the NPS office. It was the most frightening flight of our lives. There was much comforting hand squeezing as we watched the pilot use his radar screen, with bright red mountain warning indicators on both sides, as he carefully navigated us through miles of narrow canyons as we bumped and gyrated through the storm.

Finally breaking out of those clouds and seeing the 32-mile milky azure lake was a "Hallelujah" moment for us. It turned out to be a magical day. Our arrival was on Sunday morning and we soon realized that every local native Alaskan and visitor alike were making their way to their outdoor chapel. Soon we were all part of a celebratory joyful service featuring a remarkable missionary family from Iraq.

Afterwards, we were able to have a picnic, hike the trails, stroll along the lakeshore, and have a long visit with the very lonely NP ranger who said he gets less than 200 non-native visitors a summer. To cap it off we were asked to grab a US Flag and join the locals on the landing strip to say "Welcome home" to wounded veterans and their spouses arriving for a week-long retreat to help them rebuild their shattered lives.

Denali emerges from the clouds

We will be forever grateful for this opportunity to say Thank You to these brave soldiers. It somehow seemed a fitting end to our quest to experience this country's greatest treasure, our National Parks.

Jim Polk, Mona Heath, and Alan Amundsen

WABC 2019 Midwinter IBT

Jim Polk, Region 12 President and Alan Amundsen, GLAAC President, attended the WBAC Mid-Winter International Board of Trustees meeting in Robertsdale, Alabama. The weather was cool and rainy, but spirits were high. A key development was a motion to appropriate funds to completely redesign the WBCCI website to make it more user friendly and provide more services to club members. Future plans call for a redesigned database that will integrate with the new website.

Lori Plummer, Corporate Manager/Blue Beret Editor, emphasized that clubs and members of clubs are not to use the Airstream name or logo without a signed agreement on file with International. Lynda and Jim Polk have arranged that agreement for GLAAC. We can legally use "Airstream" in our name. Be aware that some clubs without the signed agreement jeopardize legal agreements between WBCCI and Airstream Inc.

On to Doswell, Virginia, for the July 20-27 International Rally. Eric McHenry, Bay Area Airstream Club, will be nominated for 3rd Vice-President at that time. Our own affiliate member, Mona Heath, will be installed as International President. Jim Polk will serve as Treasurer, and Alan Amundsen will serve as Parliamentarian.

GLAAC Garden Flags

GLAAC is once again proud to offer our club garden flag for sale! We are now taking orders for your personalized flag which will include your names and WBCCI number. The flag size is 12.5 X 18 inches and is double sided. We were able to negotiate a bulk discount from Flagology if we order 10 or more flags at one time. Keep in mind that single flags purchased on their own list for $49.99 each. In addition, GLAAC's board has offered to provide a onetime $10 allowance per Airstream towards the purchase of your flag netting your cost from the bulk price of $25.00 down to just $15.00. If you've already purchased a flag, but are looking to obtain a new one, your price will be $25.00—still a bargain from ordering individually!

This price does not include the garden flag holder. Flag holders can be purchased on line at prices ranging from $6.39 (www.unitedstatesflag.com) to $9.59 (www.acehardware.com). You can also find them at most kite, flag or hardware stores.

The deadline for this offer is April 30th. If you are interested in letting your proud colors shine around your campsite at upcoming events contact Pamela Pall at Events.GLAAC@gmail.com
